"Hurricane near Pearl Harbor"

"Fire in Wington, P.C."

A Hurricane thundered *stopped down the west coast of a normally hurricane-free area. It went closely to entering Pearl Harbor.
It rounded shore county and is going south. Pearl County has a close shave.

A fire has been raging in Wington, P.C. It has burned 45 homes.
10 people have died and 20 are slightly burned.
One bird caught sight of a dog in a large 2 story house
which was in flames.
He flew up to the dog
and rescued him,
uninjured, to safety.
The fire has been put out on the 18th.
It started on the 16th. - NR.

"Tornado passes close to Mt. Vernon."

A huge tornado went very close to Mt. Vernon.
The Magical For Forest stayed unharmmed, very unusual, for not a breath of wind stirred a tree. The plain forest has a huge break of trees. It destroyed 100 homes, Farjay was safe (1 house).
A3 It disappeared in Shore County by Coon Lake. - NR.

The Discontent Trash Can

moral: be content with what you have.

There once was a ~~tiny~~ black trashcan which sat in the yard of a little pink house. He had two friends with him. A blue trashcan and a green trashcan.

"Oh, how I wish these flies didn't have to spin and dance about me. I wish I could smell nice like the blue trashcan." sighed the black trashcan.

"We fly around you because you have food in you." screeched the flies.

"Alas, I wish ~~it~~ then that I could be empty. And then ~~we~~ I wouldn't have nasty flies spinning, " around me, me of all trashcans." screamed the black trashcan.

"You might get your wish. From those who go into the house and escape a swatting being killed, they tell ~~us~~ us that they are packing." said the flies.

The trashcan sat there glaring and glaring as trashbag after trashbag was thrown into him day by day.

The blue trashcan, she didn't ~~no~~ mind having one ~~to~~ trashbag come in every three or four days. She would say:

"I serve a great purpose. I am filled with bag trashbags which will be used again!"

The trashcan just thought, "She's just proud because she doesn't have flies spinning and dancing around day and night. But she is standing right beside me. We might as well marry."

The trashcan cried, "Dearheart, will you marry me?"

The she thought and replied:

"No."

The trashcan glared again. Soon he was rolled out of the yard and set at the side of the road. The truck came and emptied him, the blue trashcan, and the green trashcan. When he came back the flies said, "Did you see that U-haul haul?"

"Yes," he replied.

Later that day he heard a car's engine starting. The car's noisy engine drifted away. Silence settled.

The empty trashcans sat there for a week before they realized that there were not going to be any more trash<sup>bags</sup> in them.

The black trash can cried tears and he would have given anything to see a fly, a trashbag, or a light in the windows.

He sighed and looked at the moon as he sailed by in the cloudless sky.

"Oh, I wish I hadn't ~~g~~ complained about the smelly trashbags and buzzing flies." he cried and a tear fell to the ground.

Later after years had passed, a family arrived. The black trashcan smiled when he saw flies and trashbags.
